[Remote Review]: first in a series of three Object EP's released in digital format. Peter Van Hoesen's experimental alter ego cranks out four tracks of high-res machine blues. Whether it's mutated breakbeats striving to release themselves from a layer of insistent soundscapes ('Gordon takes a break') or semi-acoustic sounds arranged in a deceptively minimalist manner ('Folk Four'), in every song the listener is confronted with a skewed logic of composition.

If there is a strategy to the EP, it's one of unexpected twists and turns. 'Renewed Strength' sounds like Autechre on speed on a rainy day whereas 'Kmt-y Statement's' fragmented techno groove explores various repetitive possibilities. Both present their beauty in the oscillation between linear and cut-up - a musical language taking the listener into a rich and varied sonic space.

The visuals for the Remote Review EP are based on pictures of Brussels' Zuidertoren/Tour du Midi/South Tower.
